

3 IOWAS KILLED BY BLACK DAMP IN MINE

Norman Baker

(HIMSELF)

"Hello, folks"

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Instead of the little things you wish to do for Muscatine—get after the really important things—Rock Island is stepping all over you—here is the way they do it—recently the Pine Bluff church west of Illinois city—just a few miles across our bridge—gave a chicken supper—in order to help the church, the Rock Island merchants bought about 100 tickets—then they went down there in a bunch—they gave a "speech"—the church auditorium was filled—Mr. E. E. Scott of the committee from Rock Island got up and he said—"You have to cross many bridges to get to Rock Island, but the bridges are all free, there's no toll"—then another fellow jumped up and gave economic facts about trading in Rock Island—NOT ONE REPRESENTATIVE WAS THERE FROM THE MUSCATINE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE, as far as I know—merchants WAKE UP—demand some actions for YOU, the small fellow, instead of all the action being for the IOWA BOSSES—you'll get along better—this is just a hint to watch the Rock Island boys who are already busy getting the cross river trade from Muscatine—maybe it is necessary for the officers to get permission from the Iowa Ave. Bosses before they can cross the bridge to gather business—we used to get it when K-TNT was on the air—Oh boy, how good those 5000 and 10,000 and 50,000 crowds would be to our store people if they were here now.

ATTENTION RURAL FOLKS

In Friday's issue of the Cedar Rapids Gazette—on front page—there appeared two articles—one was about a lone bandit or gunman getting $5000 by robbing a bank—a big sensational story—appeared in second column as important—BUT across the full front page in big black screaming headlines appeared—2 WOMEN ATTACK CATTLE TESTER—then follows the story of the Cedar County affair about two women throwing eggs at tester—the point I wish to bring out is that the bank robber got away with $5000 and a small notice—that is a smaller headline than the two farm women got for merely throwing a few eggs—if any farmer that reads the Cedar Rapids Gazette knows of one column of material they ever printed of value or for the good of the common farmer—please write me so I can see it—when it comes to things against the farmer, they are right there taking their copy many times from the government department farm organization that "machines" the farmer—

FURTHER—about that throwing eggs and things in Cedar County cattle testing affair—the press associations told a lie—it said that the tester was hit by some sharp hard thing that cut him above the eye—NO—it was only an egg with a shell on it—why lie about such things—then too—they said that the man stood in the barn door waving a club—that's a lie—it was only the cane he used for years to walk with—the truth is better than all this fake business—we too printed the press story of the affair as it came over the wire—we didn't know better—but the above are facts—the tester they claim, came to the home and told the wife and daughter that the father or husband had told him it was all O. K. to test—they knew it was a lie—so eggs flew—the truth the state man had told the truth the eggs would not have moved—we do not advocate violence—but we do advocate the TRUTH.

LISTEN CEDAR COUNTY FARMERS—rush and get your cows' milk tested, send samples to Abel Laboratories, Chicago Building, 7 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.—make each cow by number—mark each bottle by number—rush them special delivery—enclose $1.00 for each sample you want tested—only a small bottle is necessary—about two or three ounces—each.

New British Cabinet Sworn In Before King of England

No Demonstration Is Held as New Group Takes Oath

By OTTO D. TOLISCHUS

LONDON—(INS)—The new cabinet of co-operation, born of one of the gravest crises in the history of Great Britain, was sworn in this morning before King George and the privy council at Buckingham Palace.

After the oath had been administered in a ceremony with its ritual dated back hundreds of years, the king distributed to his new ministers the seals of office which he had previously received from the members of the retiring cabinet.

A large crowd watched the procession of distinguished commoners and peers of the realm went its way in automobiles to Buckingham Palace.

There was no demonstration except that as Prime Minister MacDonald, who deserted the socialist principles of his party because he thought that national necessity compelled it, left his Downing street residence, J. H. Thomas, a man darted from the small crowd assembled outside and shouted "Judas!"

The two laborite ministers, both wearing mourning clothes and silk hats, ignored the man and rode away in an automobile.

Retiring Ministers Received The retiring ministers were received in the Indian room of Buckingham Palace. There they turned over their seals of office to the new cabinet, and a ceremony which began at 10:30 a. m.

The new cabinet, consisting of four laborites, four conservatives and two liberals, was scheduled to hold its first session at noon to consider measures for balancing the budget, among them a ten percent reduction in the dole. It was over this question that the labor cabinet split.

With the brief ceremonies of induction over, the cabinet launched again into its task of drawing up a scheme of new economies and new revenues to enable a balanced budget and save the pound sterling from collapse.

Generally speaking, the economy policies of the new ministry are expected to be largely the same as the late labor cabinet, but will include:

More Than 30,000 Are At Airport to Give Pair Ovation

By JAMES R. YOUNG

TOKYO—(INS)—The capital of the land of cherry blossoms gave the flying Lindberghs a huge ovation this afternoon as their black monoplane whirled down from overcast skies to the surface of a lake near Kasumigaura airbase here.

More than thirty thousand persons, including almost the entire American colony of Tokyo and high Japanese officials were on hand to greet a welcome to the couple, whose arrival had been awaited with anticipation for more than a week.

Their reception here rivalled in cordiality any they have received in other cities and it was probably the most colorful of all. Young Japan was represented at the flying field by officials in cutaway coats, striped trousers and high hats and thousands of others in occasional business clothes. There were youths in blazers and sport attire and maidens with bobbed hair.

An Old Japan turned out in force in flowered silk kimonos of all colors and rickshaws crowded against taxicabs and bicycles.

The Lindberghs landed at 2:09 p. m. (11:09 p. m. Iowa time) as their engine stopped and the plane came to a stop near the landing stage, the crowd surged forward shouting "banzai!" an expression equivalent to hurrah.

The aviator and his wife smiled in return and shook hands with the welcoming committee. Escorted to the microphone set up near the radioed his greetings to Japan.

He had no sooner finished speaking when the announcer gave the news of the death of former Premier Hamaguchi, who was shot by an assassin last November. The death of the premier may interfere with the six-day program of the government for the entertainment of the Lindberghs.

The fire raged unchecked for 24 hours, starting when the storage tank overflowed.

China Typhoon Toll Is 3,200

2,200 Flood Survivors Lose Their Lives In Storm

By TED THACKERAY

SHANGHAI—(INS)—The toll of dead in the Chinese flood disaster was increased by at least 3,200 by the typhoon which struck the delta, flooded to a depth of several feet, and destroyed many houses and buildings already weakened by the floods. New deaths at Wuchang totaled 1,000.

In addition, four Chinese were killed in Shanghai when they were trapped in the vaults of the National City bank by the flood waters. All available firemen were assigned to the task of pumping out the vaults, flooded to a depth of several feet. Several other banks with underground vaults suffered similarly.

Meanwhile, barring new typhoons, Hankow began today to hope for some alleviation of its sufferings. The Yangtze river, which rose to a depth of 53 feet during the height of the floods, receded several inches last night, and hopes were held out that it might speedily regain its normal level.

Relief work by Chinese and foreign officials was well under way. Warships are carrying food, medical supplies and clothing to the flood survivors, and doctors and nurses are doing all in their power to ward off pestilence.

CHICAGO—(INS)—"I'm in a hurry!"

This was the answer today of Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., to all questions regarding his future matrimonial plans. The socially prominent writer passed through Chicago en route from Reno to New York.

Vanderbilt gave his "hurry, hurry" plea particularly when rumors of his purported elopement with Mrs. Marie Glass Marshall were mentioned. He left Reno after a farewell party to Mrs. Marshall, who divorced Letha Rothrock Marshall, New York importer.

Mrs. Marshall and Vanderbilt were seen together frequently in Reno and the possibility of an elopement was discussed in their set. Mrs. Marshall is due to arrive in Chicago tomorrow on her way to New York.

Roosevelt's Unemployment Plan Interests President

Eyes of Nation Will Watch Results of Relief Program

By GEORGE R. HOLMES

WASHINGTON—(INS)—There is keen interest in the capital in the unemployment relief program that Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt has announced he will present in the special session of the New York legislature in a few days.

Gov. Roosevelt is considered the foremost candidate for the democratic presidential nomination. By many politicians he is regarded as President Hoover's most likely opponent next year.

Thus the spectacle will be presented to the country of the two likely contestants for the presidency in 1932 dealing with a grave problem that undoubtedly will play an important part in the campaign. That problem is unemployment and the collateral economic issues that enter into it.

President Hoover has already announced his program for dealing with the emergency.

It consists, as thus far revealed, in simple mobilization of local resources, under governmental direction. He has appointed Walter S. Gifford, successful executive of the country's greatest utility organization, and distinguished committee of three score outstanding citizens, to direct a national drive for funds to provide jobs for the jobless and relieve distress during the coming winter. What is contemplated is a national drive comparable to the annual Red Cross drive during the war period.

If Mr. Hoover has any other plans in the making for meeting the winter crisis they are yet to be revealed. He has taken a firm stand against anything remotely approaching "the dole" or dipping into the federal treasury for direct aid to the needy.

NEW YORK MAN SLAIN In Cigar Store by Hoodlums

NEW YORK—(INS)—Another defiance of New York's drive against gunman and gangsters aroused police and city officials today.

In the midst of a new campaign to clean up the city, four gangsters walked into a cigar store last night and murdered Theodore Naddi, 29.

Naddi was believed by police to have been a dope peddler and the authorities branded the killing as a climax to a narcotic gang war.

Naddi was playing cards with three men when killers entered. Two of the invaders held the door open, a third, gun in hand, stood guard and the fourth man fired five times. Three bullets struck Naddi.

Two Men Lose Their Lives In Rescue Role at Dudley

Brothers Enter Shaft In Futile Attempt To Save Cousin

DUDLEY, Ia.—(INS)—Two brothers, Harold and Glen Hanson, and a nephew, Ernest Redburn, were dead here today, victims of black damp in a small mine near here.

Redburn started down the shaft of the mine Tuesday afternoon while the Hansons worked the pump which drives fresh air down into the shaft. Evidence indicates he was overcome while approximately fifteen feet from the bottom of the shaft, and dropped the remaining distance.

Noticing his absence, one of the Hansons started down the shaft to find him. Apparently, he, too, was overcome before reaching the bottom of the shaft.

The other Hanson, descending the shaft in search of his brother and nephew, met a similar fate.

Anton Hanson, father of the two brothers, was at the mouth of the mine, and, becoming alarmed, rushed to his home and told his wife. While Mrs. Hanson telephoned for aid, Hanson returned to the mine and with a few neighbors tested the air in the shaft.

A fire lowered into the depths was extinguished before it was lowered halfway to the bottom.

Air was pumped into the hole until oxygen at the bottom was sufficient to feed a flame, and John Olson, Muncieville miner, descended in the cage and brought up two of the bodies. Lack of oxygen at the bottom of the shaft had so exhausted him that he was unable to go back for the third.

Frank Johnson, also of Muncieville recovered the third body.

Efforts to revive the men with a pumpmotor brought by the Ottumwa fire department were unavailing.

Ernest, 31, is survived by his widow, four-year-old son, mother, father, two brothers and a sister, Glenn, 33, was unmarried.

Redburn is survived by his widow and two children, Clarence and Fred. His home was in Des Moines.

The mine in which the three died was the property of Anton Hanson, father of Glen and Harold. Their home was nearby.

Funeral arrangements had not been completed this morning.

POLICE CLOSING UPON KIDNAPERS

Believe Capture of Abductors of Rich Sportsman Near

CHICAGO—(INS)—John J. Lynch, kidnaper of millionaire sportsman, will be released late tonight, his relatives were assured today.

LAKE GENEVA, Wis.—(INS)—Spurred by the discovery of a rendezvous occupied for a few hours by John J. Lynch, Chicago sportsman, and his kidnapers, authorities today were believed closing in on the abductors and their wealthy victim.

Pat Roche, chief investigator for the Cook county (Ill.) state's attorney's office, assumed the personal charge of the search, which he concentrated on an area ten miles square.

Roche and his aids, at a cottage on Fell lake, eight miles southeast of here, uncovered evidence that a party thought to have been the kidnaping gang had been there a short time.

DEMENTED AUTO DRIVER KILLED

Bullet Tears Through Heart After Police Give Him Chase

CHICAGO—(INS)—A bullet tearing through the heart of an apparently demented motorist today culminated a wild five-mile chase in the outskirts of Chicago during which several shots were fired and pedestrians were endangered.

The motorist, who died before he could be taken to a hospital, was identified as H. B. Young, a railroad clerk of Franklin Park, Ill., cornered at the end of the automobile chase, he was shot by Police Officer Fred Kordes as he sprang from his car brandishing a hatchet.

The chase began in the suburb of Niles when Motorcycle Officer Fran Stanowicz observed Young driving on the wrong side of the street. When the policeman halted Young the latter sidestepped the motorcycle and sped away.

A few blocks away Young scattered 150 pieces of mail for street cars. Shortly after Kordes joined Stanowicz in the chase by commandeering a car. Kordes emptied his pistol in futile efforts to puncture the tires of Young's machine.

Eventually the fugitive was forced into the curb. Stanowicz leaped to the running board, whereupon Young struck the officer's fingers with his hatchet and started away again.

This injury, it is believed, is the basis of the suit. The action is returnable at the September term of circuit court.

SEASON CUT ON DUCK HUNTING

Curtailment to One Month Is Ordered By Government

Curtailment of the open season for wild duck hunting to one month in Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin and Michigan was announced today following the approval Tuesday by President Hoover of an amendment to the migratory bird treaty regulations shortening the season on ducks, geese, brant and coots in the United States and Canada.

The season in Iowa, which starts at noon Oct. 1, will close on Oct. 31, instead of Dec. 31, the department of agriculture stated today. Shortening of the season was caused by excessive drought in the principal wild fowl breeding grounds in the northwestern United States and Canada, the biological survey explained.

Federal authorities, who recently conducted an investigation of conditions prevailing in these grounds, deemed that irreparable damage would ensue if measures were not adopted at once to reduce the kill and preserve an adequate stock of birds for breeding.

Under the provisions of the migratory bird treaty with Great Britain, the department of agriculture is charged with the protection and maintenance in this country of the birds which migrate to and from Canada. Officials of the department feel that the curtailment of the season to one month will afford sufficient protection this year.

Canadian authorities are expected to take similar action within a short time, it was stated.

County Recorder G. C. Parks, from whose office hunting and fishing licenses are issued, had not received official notice of the curtailment today.

Mr. Kern announced that tickets may be secured from him at the city hall.

To each child who sells three adult tickets a pass to the Fox Palace theater, good any time within 30 days, will be given and each boy and girl who sells the most tickets will be given a 30 day pass to the theater.

Plans are made for a large number of children to attend the concert of the band. Many rural schools will begin their classes early on the morning of Sept. 4 and be dismissed earlier than usual to permit the pupils to attend the afternoon concert which is scheduled for 3 p. m.

THINK VANDALS WRECKED AUTO

Davenport Car Found After Plunge Over Wyoming Hill

An automobile thief who is believed to have deliberately wrecked a Pontiac coupe belonging to Leonard Hadley of Davenport, by pushing it over a 50-foot embankment at the crest of Wyoming hill Tuesday night, was being sought today by authorities of Muscatine and Scott counties.

The car, which was stolen from a downtown street in Davenport early in the evening, was found completely wrecked at the foot of the cliff at 10:30. William Ray, a clam sheller, who has a camp not far from the hill, heard the crash and ran to the scene fearing that the car had been occupied and someone had been injured. He found no one in the car or in the immediate vicinity.

Deputy Sheriff Jack Pace hurried to Wyoming hill in response to a telephone message and with several others made a search of the car and along the railroad tracks and underbrush near the river bank. He found nothing but collecting taxes from peasants in the Gujarat district. It was reported at one time he had abandoned his intention of attending the conference early.

Returning to Muscatine, Pace notified the Davenport police that the car had been found wrecked. While he was giving the details, Hadley, owner of the car, walked into the station at Davenport and reported his car had been stolen.

Hadley said he had parked his car on a street in the business district and went for a ride with some friends in another car. He found it missing on his return.

That the car was deliberately wrecked by the thief is evidenced by the fact that it went over the cliff at a point where there is no guard rail, due to the rock formation which prevented the placing of a fence. The frame of the car was doubled up and the car wrecked beyond repair. The windshield and tires, however, were not damaged.

The car was lying at the base of the cliff and within a few feet of the railroad track ballast. A section crew moved it away from the tracks today.

Do They Fear Baker?

Right now, when farmers throughout eastern Iowa are showing their tremendous interest by turning out in groups of thousands to hear Norman Baker speak, is a good time to pause and take a look at things as they are.

A newspaper owes to its readers a very definite and positive obligation to print the news. Many papers recognize this duty and make a show at least of doing it. On the other hand, practically every large daily paper in the state is guilty of flagrant violation of its duty to its readers, when it deliberately ignores the news in the farmers' mass meetings.

There was a time when newspapers prided themselves on their fearless attitude toward news. If it was news, it was printed, regardless of whether the individual paper's policy was furthered or hurt and regardless of whose toes were trampled upon by publishing the item. That day seems to have passed.

Because the papers of the state do not like Norman Baker, they ignore the mass meetings of the farmers. Perhaps they don't like the farmers, either, and don't want the rest of the world to know what the farmers are doing or thinking.

We have a feeling that the attendance at the meetings addressed by Mr. Baker is setting statewide records. Mr. Baker has always been a popular drawing card with the farmers, the laboring people and the common folks, as witness crowds drawn to Muscatine which exceeded even the crowd which turned out to welcome President Hoover on his return to the place of his birth. And no special trains were run to the Baker meetings.

The attendance at the series of mass meetings held this summer has seldom fallen below 2,000 people and has reached the seven thousand figure.

If it is news that twelve women played bridge at Mrs. Smith's house yesterday afternoon, and it seems to be universally recognized that items regarding such gatherings are news, then why isn't it news if thousands of farmers gather to hear a man speak?

If the farmers of Iowa are seeking to learn truths from public speakers, it may be possible it is because they have been denied the right to learn the truth in their daily papers.

A certain paper in this state claims to be a state-wide publication. It boasts of its service to every community in the state and sells its papers on the theory that it does print all the news. We wonder what a man who has attended a gathering of 5,000 people thinks when he picks up his paper next morning and finds no mention whatever of the meeting.

All papers do not pretend to be state-wide papers. Some of them attempt only to serve their immediate communities and the rural districts adjacent to the town where the paper is printed. We wonder what the man who has attended a meeting, at which 5,000 people were present, thinks when he opens his home town newspaper and finds no mention of the meeting.

We have heard Norman Baker called a radical because he has told the people the truth. We have seen newspapers sneeringly refer to a statement by Mr. Baker calling the press "subsidized," and accusing newspapers of suppressing news because they did not want their readers to know about certain things. What do you think? Haven't the newspapers themselves completely proved Mr. Baker's charges?

It is a very evident fact that there exists in Iowa a conspiracy of silence. It is very evident that the newspapers do not intend to mention Mr. Baker unless they can do so in some derogatory manner. They apparently believe that, by ignoring the huge mass meetings at which he speaks, they can prevent other people from knowing that there is a movement on foot in Iowa which is very apt to result in a thorough house-cleaning.

We cannot help but feel that the newspaper bosses are acting in a very short-sighted way, in pursuing their conspiracy of silence. If proof of this is needed, the phenomenal growth of the Midwest Free Press should be considered. At a time when practically every newspaper is fighting to hold its own in circulation, the Free Press continues to receive paid subscriptions in increasingly large numbers. Barely eight months old, the paper has increased its subscription list until it now is well on the road to 10,000—and all bona fide paid circulation.

The question is, what are you folks going to do about it? Are you going to continue to let newspapers tell you what you shall read and what you shall not? If you live in a county where one of these mass meetings has been held, why not write a letter to your editor and ask him why his paper failed to mention a news item as big as that? If you subscribe for a so-called state-wide paper, why not write the editor and ask him why his paper ignores anything as obvious as a mass meeting of thousands of farmers?

While you are writing, why not ask your editor why he disapproves of Norman Baker? Ask him if it is because Mr. Baker told the world that cancer is curable and the doctors didn't like it. Ask him if it is because Mr. Baker has told you the truth about newspapers suppressing news. Ask him whether it is because he fears Mr. Baker's "one farm organization" plan.

Then write and tell us what answer you get—if any.

An exchange says the most remarkable manifestation of tolerance the editor has yet seen is the vacation fishermen who says, "If the fish don't want to bite, I guess that's their business."

Dr. Arthur Torrance, of Los Angeles, claims to have found another lost tribe in the southern part of the Sahara Desert. Coming from Los Angeles, the good doctor should recognize a lost tribe when he sees one.

A Chicago man was fined $10 when his wife complained that he became angry at her and chewed up the furniture. The poor bird probably mistook it for wifery's biscuits.

Mrs. Pauline Pitcher, of Cleveland, asked for a divorce. "I found out his 'fortune' was only 30 cents," she told the judge. A new version of the broken pitcher.

Mayor Walker of New York has gone to Germany for a "cure." We hope he takes a nice, big, foamy one for us, too.

The national deficit of $860,000,000 should not excite anyone. We aim to make our government truly representative of the people.

Our Platform for the People Is:

1. Less taxation.
2. Fewer State Commissions.
3. Universal school books.
4. Lower freight rates.
5. Return of river transportation.
6. A cleanup of some state institutions.
7. More efficiency in public offices.

Medical Fallacies

FALSE MEDICAL DOCTRINES

In the last few articles of this series Dr. Benedict Lust of New York City has explained the workings of commercialized medicine and stated many specific instances of the tyranny of the medical tyrant in its endeavor to stifle all competition in the healing art. Dr. Lust has had wide experience as a medical man and has a wonderful record of achievement in the treatment and cure of disease by natural methods to which he has dedicated his life. He is an educator also and Editor of Nature's Path, a splendid and fearless publication devoted to health education. From his own personal experience Dr. Lust is well qualified to speak of the tyranny of the medical tyrant, and his words have been arrested innumerable times and have been brought into court on many different charges in connection with his medical practice and health education work. However, the flimsy charges were most evident when a court hearing was finally held, but the aggregate cost amounted to thousands of dollars and naturally interfered greatly with the splendid work Dr. Lust is carrying on. His personal experience shows the extremes to which the medical tyrant will go to keep his patients who have the real good of their patients at heart and wish to cure them by sane, rational methods.

Dr. Lust in his address in Chicago while on a tour West made some startling revelations concerning the practices used by "regular" medicine. He showed, too, that police power is often used by health officials which is used to further their own ends and results in tyranny and also works a great injustice on those who are making a sincere effort to really cure disease, and who in this way incur the displeasure of the medical tyrant. Instances of the use of police power by the New York County Medical Society were cited by Dr. Lust in his address. He says: "They had their own private policemen and the druggists' practitioners were put in jail and the money collected was divided among those who brought the charges and caused the arrests. It was a self-constituted authority, a government within a government, and what we had there in New York we have in a sectional way throughout most of the United States.

The American Medical Trust with its headquarters in Chicago is exercising an invisible government within the Government of the United States. I am making a broad statement but I can prove it. I can prove it from my own experience with the different departments of the Government. I am glad to give this message and state what I have in the cause of natural life, the nature cure, and medical freedom. It is our right to select a doctor and the man of our choice. Let's be true citizens of the United States, but don't let us go down quiescent with a system that is un-American and undemocratic all the way through. These people fool the public and their big public and endowed establishments, with their millions, with these charity organizations and hospitals, and I tell you they are drunk with power. I hope the day when all the States abolish all the medical laws because the medical laws are very bad for the nation and for the people. Think of the War! When a boy was taken into the army he became practically a convict. They injected three kinds of serum into his body. I tell you that more boys died from the effects of medical treatment and more are sick today from the effects of medical treatment in state institutions and public in-

THE WOOD MOUSE MAKES

BUSTER BEAR RUN

Of all the little people who live in the Green Forest, Whitefoot the Wood Mouse, own cousin to Dan and Meade Mouse, is one of the smallest, the most beautiful and the most timid. They say of Whitefoot that he actually tries to run away from his own shadow. But the sound of his own voice makes him jump. Of course we don't believe this. It is just a way of saying that he is very, very timid. But I guess you and I would be just as timid as Whitefoot if we were in his place. You see he is such a little fellow, such a dear little fellow! He has no way of protecting himself except by running away and hiding. It is little to be sure, but it isn't that he is a coward that makes him so timid. It is because he knows if he is caught, he can do nothing to help himself, and because he knows that night and day sharp eyes are watching for him, keen ears are listening for him, and wonderful noses are trying to find him.

You see there are many people who are fond of Whitefoot, very fond indeed. Not in the way that you and I are fond of him are these neighbors of his fond of him, but as a choice bit for their stomachs. So they are forever hunting for him—in the daytime most of the members of the Hawk family and even Blacky the Crow when he has nothing better to do, in the night Hooty the Owl and Reddy and Granny Fox, and day or night, as the fancy takes them, Shadow the Weasel and Billy Mink. Even Buster Bear hunts Whitefoot when he has nothing else on his mind. Do you wonder that Whitefoot is very, very timid, and always ready to run and hide at the least sound?

On the day when Buster Bear had twice been frightened by Farmer Brown's Boy, and really had no cause for being frightened, Whitefoot was himself twice as frightened, but, unlike Buster, he had had real cause for fright. Once Hawk watching from the top of a tree and had ventured out for a moment to get Buster's great glass, had missed him by so little that it was five minutes before Whitefoot could make himself believe that he really was safe. Once Billy Mink had charmed him into a hole just as he was about to get away, and he was bit too small for Billy to follow. Both times Whitefoot had been terribly frightened, but in a little while he had forgotten his fright. He was used to such frights. They happened every day of his life. Once they were over there was no use in thinking about them. He had escaped, for which he was truly thankful, so why think about them?

Just at dusk, when the Black Shadows were beginning to creep through the Green Forest, he went out again. This day the time of day Whitefoot loves best, and in which he feels safest. It is a little too late for Redtail and the other hawks to be hunting, and a little too early for Hooty the Owl to be abroad. It is his play time. So Whitefoot ran about and frolicked all by himself and was quite as happy as if there were no such things as hungry neighbors who were looking for tender wood mice. Suddenly he heard heavy steps approaching and dodged under an old piece of bark. Nearer came those steps and Whitefoot held his breath. Peeping out he saw Buster Bear. Right away he noticed that something was wrong with Buster. He kept turning his head from side to side and looking behind him uneasily. All the time he kept sniffing, but when he did this he held his head high.

Whitefoot gave the tiniest sniff of relief. "He isn't looking for me, that is sure," thought he. "If he was he would be sniffing along the ground instead of up in the air. I wonder what all this is about." Buster passed so close that he almost stepped on that piece of bark under which Whitefoot was hiding, and Whitefoot held his breath. The instant Buster was past Whitefoot decided that it was no place for him. Buster might take it into his head to come back. Just a few feet away was a hole, a trace to a secret little tunnel. He would be safer there. Whitefoot darted out from under the piece of bark and scurried across to that secret tunnel, and as he did so his scampering little feet rustled some dead leaves. Then a surprising thing happened. With a frightened "Woof!" Buster Bear gave a great jump and ran away. Whitefoot

People's Pulpit

(Ed. Note: Old Timer today finishes the report of what he told a collector for Muscatine's second newspaper when solicited to subscribe.)

The third occasion when I stopped the Journal was when they were fighting our municipal light plant. But our city fathers, who were very polite and very kind, people not to patronize them, even insulting and abusing people who did, even though they were deriving their income from them by selling them goods, bringing a considerable sum into Muscatine and spending the bulk of it with our merchants. I myself even paid for the Journal with money received from these people.

But I failed to use that oil of compassion ever fresh. To avoid the burning-out of bearings, or anyknoles.

You may think you have done your duty. Because you have always paid your debts because you were able to do so.

But that is not all. You have at the end of the road paid out all you had.

But have no returns because the seed you planted was only the duty of existence.

With seed of intentions that were unfruitful.

Void of love and charity which alone has a harvest that multiplies itself.

And as with a good bank account. You may write the figures of demand upon an old shirt.

And with the addition of your signature.

The will that made the deposit. You can have all that you demand, which was yours.

And he who has always paid his debts as a banker.

Must give you what you have planted.

THE POINT OF VIEW

The Cannibal says that man must eat flesh. The dairy man says that man must use milk. The poultry man says that man must eat eggs. The yeast manufacturer says that his product is vitally necessary for the health of the body. The coffee says that coffee is a healthful beverage. The sugar trust says to eat more sugar for energy and endurance. The serum trust says to be vaccinated and inoculated so you will be protected from disease. The tobacco companies use tobacco, not a cough in a car-load and so on, and reach for a smoke instead of a sweet so you won't get too fat. The peanut trust says to eat peanuts daily for the nerves sake. The bootlegger says drink alcohol for it peeps you up. The dope-fiend says dope for it makes you happy and you own the earth and for get your troubles. The different dietitians claim you must not eat any meat at all. The raw food fadists claim that nothing should be cooked, that everything should be eaten just as it comes from nature to give one the needed organic salts so vital to health. The modern sunbathers advise living in the sunshine day after day; then all the bathers say sure; chop a hole in the ice and drop in for a spell and splash around, it makes you hard and fit.

When considering these various ideas and their advocates it is well to bear in mind the elements of habit, belief, teaching, inherited ideas and hunger for living in the sun. To moderate in all things, even in being moderate is not a bad idea. What if a representative of each one of the above listed ideas should all get together in a hall and propound their ideas to an audience? How would the individual person feel on coming out of the hall. Probably most of them would throw up their hands and go order a full course dinner and have it over with.

It is well to take the middle of the road until you find out for yourself that which best agrees with you and makes you feel the healthiest and cleanest, inside and out.

could hardly believe what his eyes told him to be true. He, little Whitefoot the Wood Mouse, had frightened great big Buster Bear and made him run! A few minutes later he saw Buster come back very stealthily with a sheepish look on his face, and he knew that Buster had guessed what had frightened him, and he was wise enough to remain hidden. But all the rest of that night he kept looking out for him, and he knew that Buster was actually had frightened Buster Bear. You see he didn't know about that day, and how jumpy they had that day, and how jumpy they left his nerves.

Give It A Thought

By Joseph A. Sadony

A man with authority assumes all the condemnation and grief of his influence.

Often the son of the man hanged. Convinced the judge who executed the father.

While the same son may defend the son of that judge.

And save him from the gallows. These are the personal responsibilities of you, assuming leadership.

If you have earned your authority deviously.

You have nothing to fear; For you know how to think with wisdom.

But if you do not deserve it, You have learned what to think by knowledge.

But failed to use that oil of compassion ever fresh.

To avoid the burning-out of bearings, or anyknoles.

You may think you have done your duty. Because you have always paid your debts because you were able to do so.

But that is not all. You have at the end of the road paid out all you had.

But have no returns because the seed you planted was only the duty of existence.

With seed of intentions that were unfruitful.

Void of love and charity which alone has a harvest that multiplies itself.

And as with a good bank account. You may write the figures of demand upon an old shirt.

And with the addition of your signature.

The will that made the deposit. You can have all that you demand, which was yours.

And he who has always paid his debts as a banker.

Must give you what you have planted.

Old Timer

THE POINT OF VIEW

The Cannibal says that man must eat flesh. The dairy man says that man must use milk. The poultry man says that man must eat eggs. The yeast manufacturer says that his product is vitally necessary for the health of the body. The coffee says that coffee is a healthful beverage. The sugar trust says to eat more sugar for energy and endurance. The serum trust says to be vaccinated and inoculated so you will be protected from disease. The tobacco companies use tobacco, not a cough in a car-load and so on, and reach for a smoke instead of a sweet so you won't get too fat. The peanut trust says to eat peanuts daily for the nerves sake. The bootlegger says drink alcohol for it peeps you up. The dope-fiend says dope for it makes you happy and you own the earth and for get your troubles. The different dietitians claim you must not eat any meat at all. The raw food fadists claim that nothing should be cooked, that everything should be eaten just as it comes from nature to give one the needed organic salts so vital to health. The modern sunbathers advise living in the sunshine day after day; then all the bathers say sure; chop a hole in the ice and drop in for a spell and splash around, it makes you hard and fit.

When considering these various ideas and their advocates it is well to bear in mind the elements of habit, belief, teaching, inherited ideas and hunger for living in the sun. To moderate in all things, even in being moderate is not a bad idea. What if a representative of each one of the above listed ideas should all get together in a hall and propound their ideas to an audience? How would the individual person feel on coming out of the hall. Probably most of them would throw up their hands and go order a full course dinner and have it over with.

could hardly believe what his eyes told him to be true. He, little Whitefoot the Wood Mouse, had frightened great big Buster Bear and made him run! A few minutes later he saw Buster come back very stealthily with a sheepish look on his face, and he knew that Buster had guessed what had frightened him, and he was wise enough to remain hidden. But all the rest of that night he kept looking out for him, and he knew that Buster was actually had frightened Buster Bear. You see he didn't know about that day, and how jumpy they had that day, and how jumpy they left his nerves.

CAMPOLO FROM ARGENTINA MEETS SCHAAF TONIGHT

SCRAP PROMISES TO BE ONE OF BEST OF YEAR

Both Boxers, However, Were Out Fought by Tommy Loughran

By LES CONKLIN
(BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE)
NEW YORK—Victorio Campolo, tall, raw-boned Argentinean, turns to the ring tonight in the feature twelve-round bout of promoter Jimmy Johnston's heavy-weight carnival at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn.

The gauchito's opponent is Ernie Schauf, Jack Sharkey's rejuvenated protégé, and the scrap should be one of the best of the year.

Both made a miserable showing against the nimble Tommy Loughran—Campolo because he was ring rusty and Schauf because his mind moved no faster than his feet, which never would be mistaken for Mercury's.

Schauf has been installed an 8 to 5 favorite over the Argentine string bean, but the former savior is going to face a desperate man tonight. Kept inactive by contracts and managers and plunged into debt to the tune of $16,000, Campolo is grimly determined to fight his way to the top of the flistic ladder.

Make no mistake about Campolo, who can hit as hard as any of the heavyweight contenders. He was the first to knock out Tom Heeney, the once rugged hard rock, and almost dropped Loughran with a right in the heart.

Schauf, at rugged as they come, proved he could take it when he absorbed Max Baer's hardest shots without quivering. Ernie is a better boxer than Campolo but will have to reach high to clip the South American beanpole on the button.

Defeat tonight will send Campolo back to the Pampas. If Schauf loses, he will be set back six months in his pursuit of the heavyweight diadem. Carefully "built up" since losing to Loughran, Ernie has scored seven consecutive knockouts against opponents of a calibre none too high.

GOLF TOURNEY IN 2ND ROUND

Seven of 16 Left in Contest Are Women From Chicago

CHICAGO—(INS)—Chicago golfers dominated the second round of play in the women's western open tournament today. Seven of the 19 survivors hailing from the windy city.

Mrs. Leonard Pressler, Los Angeles, for the first time and three under par for the next three holes.

One of the few upsets was the defeat of Mrs. George Liffur of Los Angeles, who studied a foot long putt needed to square the match with Rena Nelson, Chicago, until she wavered and missed badly.

Mrs. Leonard Pressler, Los Angeles, medalist, with a record-breaking 79, had little difficulty defeating Mrs. A. H. Shell of Glenn Oaks, 6 and 4.

Today's pairings are: Mrs. Tyson and Ann Webster, Leavenworth, Kan.; Mrs. O. S. Hill, Kansas City and Miss Nelson.

Virginia Van Wie, Chicago, and Jean Armstrong, Chicago.

Mrs. H. Austin Pardue, Chicago, and Mrs. John Arends, Detroit.

Miss Beebe's previous open championship, won a 12-foot downhill putt for a birdie at the last green to defeat Miss Dorothy Foster, of Springfield, one up.

Mrs. Robert Bullard, Springfield, playing in the first flight lost to Mrs. F. A. Dowling, Kansas City, two down.

In the second flight, Mrs. Frank Evans, Springfield, beat Mrs. Stanley Jaacks, Oak Park, 4 and 3, and today plays Mrs. R. L. Wetzel, Evanston.

Barry gave up only one walk and struck out three. O. Koph on the mound for the losers struck out none and gave up two walks. The Barry team played good ball throughout the game with Kuriger, centerfield, and Shenk, shortstop, being the brightlights. Box scores:

WYOMING TEAM GETS ROBINSON

Local Marksman Will Shoot for Western State at Perry

Charles D. Robinson, expert marksman, who in past seasons has won many records in National shooting matches, will once again compete at Camp Perry, this time lending his services to the Wyoming State rifle team.

Mr. Robinson, who traveled to Cheyenne, Wyo., to attend the tryouts for the team, ranked second high in the state. He shot a 336 score out of a possible 350 over the 500 yard team course with an extra 50 point score of rapid fire at 200 yards.

The 200 and 300 yards were shot on target A with a ten inch bulls eye. At 600 yards he shot at target B and at 1,000 yards at target C.

Back in 1924, Mr. Robinson together with three other rifle men, won the National team championship and the same four placed second in 1925, missing first place by only three points. The other three men were Edgar Wakefield of Des Moines, Tom Pettit of Des Moines and George Parker of Webb, Ia.

The local shooter has attended the matches at Camp Perry eleven different times, shooting with the Iowa rifle team ten times and the Nebraska team once.

Other members who will make up the Wyoming team this year are: Russell L. Griffith, 336; Lyman Paddock, 334; Ted Paddock, 319; A. M. Hoover, 318; George F. McIntosh, 317; Elmer Morrison, 317; Eldon Paddock, 316; Mathias Katzo, 311; Frank Chase, 304.

Mr. Robinson will leave early Thursday morning for Camp Perry together with his daughter, Monica Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Roman and Miss Irene George.

MCCARTHY NOW PROUD OF HIS BOY, CHAPMAN

Gets His 51st Stolen Base as Yanks Win Over Sox, 8 to 0

By COPELAND C. BURG
INS Service Sports Writer

NEW YORK—(INS)—"As a second baseman he would make a swell outfielder."

That was what Manager Joe McCarthy said about his bright boy, Ben Chapman, after he watched the lad work out at St. Petersburg this spring.

And the quip so inspired the Yanks' manager that when Dusty Cooke was injured he sent Chapman into the outfield. To tell the truth McCarthy did not expect much but today he had to admit he drew one of the shining new stars of baseball.

Chapman accounted for his fifty-first stolen base yesterday as the Yanks turned back the Chicago White Sox 8 to 0 with Herb Pennock handling the horse collars.

Not since 1922, when George Sisor accomplished the feat, has anyone done so well in common and grand larceny. In 1920 Sam Rice of Washington swiped 62 bases and Chapman has a chance to equal that record this season, although Ty Cobb's American league record of 96 is just as safe as though it were locked up in the United States mint.

The New York Giants flopped the Chicago Cubs, twice, 5 to 3 and 7 to 1, tightening their hold on the runnerup position. Mel Ott made two home runs in the afternoon, one coming with three men on and aiding Hubbell to the first triumph.

Chapman puzzled the Bruins in the vesper with only seven hits and was backed up with some heavy clouting by Terry and Hogan. Ensign, Barion, Hogan, Hemsey and Hummel also got home runs in the day's barrage.

Rommell Wins for A's
Rommell hurled the Athletics to a 4 to 1 win over the St. Louis Browns, placing the A's out in front by almost 15 games, the longest lead they have held this season.

Seibold began walking men in the tenth when he should have fanned them and his scansion, with an error by Maguire, gave the St. Louis Cardinals a 4 to 1 pasting of the Boston Braves. Johnson got credit for the pitching feat.

Lefty Heimach went in to stave off a more bitter disaster for Brooklyn in the ninth inning of the first game and managed to quickly subdue the Pirates, but the bugs took the thing 5 to 3. Continuing on the mound in the finale, Heimach silenced the Pirates with three lonely hits, the Robins snatching the game, 5 to 0.

Fine pitching by Lucas and hitting by Cuccinello, and sensation of the Phillies 8 to 0, but J. Elliott was firm in the second game restricting Cincinnati to five hits as the Quakers won, 1 to 0.

Lloyd Brown held the Tigers scoreless until the eighth, when Crowder took his place and kept law and order for the Washington Senators, who copped 5 to 1.

Boston and Cleveland did not play.

Metzger to Analyze "Rock's" Big Plays

Sol Metzger, nationally known football expert, will write a series of articles for the Free Press every day beginning Monday under the title TOUCHDOWN SECRETS.

In this series he will analyze the scoring plays used by the successful coaches throughout the country. His sketches show the players in action and reveal the strategy that is so mystifying to the spectator. Plays are run off so rapidly that it is almost impossible to discern all the fine points which Metzger shows in his drawings.

The opening articles will deal with the Notre Dame plays made famous by Knute Rockne. Don't miss them. If you enjoy football you will enjoy these articles.

MEET ME AT THE SMOKE SHOP

WAGNER'S

AMES FOOTBALL PROSPECTS ARE DECLARED GOOD

Promises to Be Well Balanced Eleven This Season

AMES, Ia.—(INS)—Anxiously awaiting the chance to overcome the jinx that has pursued Iowa State college football teams through seventeen successive games on the gridiron in the last two years, the cyclone 1931 eleven should be one of the best in the history of the school.

It will not, judging from a pre-season examination of the Iowa State prospects, be a team built around two or three stars, but will be a well-balanced eleven made up entirely of veterans who with proper coaching should finish the big six race this year well up in the standings and win two or three of its non-conference games.

Many Young Players
Head Coach George Venker who is taking the reins of the cyclones this year for the first time will not have as serious a problem as he might have had, had not Noel Workman, his predecessor who resigned last year to enter business, been thinking of the 1931 team last season. Workman devoted a majority of his attention to young players who had at least one more year of competition left after last year.

As a result a complete team of veterans returns this fall to Iowa State. The line material that went toward the construction of the 1930 forward wall which ranked favorably with any in the midwest will return nearly complete.

Members 1931 Team Back
Both the 1930 cyclone wingmen who snagged so many passes last year will be members of the 1931 team. They are Franz Swoboda of Omaha, Nebraska, and Johnny Moen from Mason City. These two men with their long arms and their speed were on the receiving end of the Iowa aerial attack last year, practically the only strong offensive power the 1930 Cyclones possessed.

Andy Farrell also from Omaha together with John Cowan of Oskaloosa, a 1929 freshman star, will make bids for the end posts and will be good reserve material to substitute when needed for the two regulars.

Veterans to Return
Bob Smith of Des Moines and Franklin Nolte of Hampton, both veterans, will return this year for their reason with the Cyclone team. During the last season Smith was

Futile Efforts to Stamp Out The Mystic Dancing Dervishes

Hangings and imprisonment have failed to end orgies of self-hypnotism practiced in secret by the whirling, howling and fire-worshipping fanatics now forced to accept modern ways of the new Turkish republic, though they work for its overthrow and the return of the old rule of the Mohammedan caliphate

By
IRENE DI ROBILANT

ISTANBUL, TURKEY.
THE hanging of 27 Moslems and one Jew at Menemen in Asia Minor and the imprisonment of over 300 people accused of partaking in the conspiracy headed by the mystic Nakshibendi Dervishes, have in no way suppressed the activities of all the religious sects against which Gazi Kemal Pasha, Turkish dictator, has waged a determined and harsh war.

Dervish "Tekes" or temples have, by order of the Republic, been closed since 1925. The famous Dancing Dervish Mosque in Konia has become a museum, and the chandeliers, ritual instruments and costumes of the Bektachi sect can be seen at the National Museum of Ankara.

A former Dervish sheik is a member of the National Parliament and wears a hat with perfect ease, while the tombs of Dervish founders and saints are gradually being removed to national cemeteries, and the state claims the often valuable land in the cities which they formerly occupied.

Apparently the Gazi had been once more victorious, and in all larger cities and among the truly westernized members of Turkish society, few tears are shed on the passing of the Dervishes, whose activities were suspected in many fields and who had come to be regarded as an idle and often vicious crowd which derived its livelihood from the superstitious fanaticism of the poorest and most ignorant part of the population.

And yet, notwithstanding this apparent success, not many months ago the Dervish sect known as Nakshibendi was able to stage a revolt in Menemen in which a young Turkish officer was beheaded with a blunt pen knife.

While wearing hats and apparently conforming to republican laws, Dervishes still circulate in cities and countryside, never losing an opportunity to lay the blame for the present difficult economic condition at the door of the "impious" government of Gazi Kemal Pasha. In the same manner, as soon as the snow melts on Mount Ararat, the Kurdish warriors, among whom many Dervishes have found refuge, start out on the war path.

While their hostility has not recently attained the proportions of the revolt in 1926, the isolation and poverty in which these bands live, as well as the proximity of the borders of both Persia and Irak, across which fugitives can find refuge and arms can be smuggled, make them an easy prey for the fanatical propaganda of the Dervishes, who urge them to lift the green banner of the prophet and enter into a holy war against republican Turkey.

IN order to understand Dervish activity and influence one has to distinguish among the various sects which, from Persia as well as Irak, have made their way into Turkey, and which have for centuries played an important part in the life and customs of the people.

In Moslem countries, Dervishes are to some extent a counterpart of the monastic orders existing among Catholics; but while Christianity ever since its earliest days favored hermits and communal life for religious brotherhoods, the practice is frowned upon by orthodox Moslems and has no place whatsoever in the ordinances assembled in the Koran.

In fact, the rites and beliefs of several Dervish sects are in open contrast with Islamism, and while they grew in number and power during certain periods of Ottoman history, they have been constantly frowned upon by the Mohammedan authorities.

While information about the Nakshibendis is difficult to obtain, abundant literature exists concerning the three types of Dervishes which had become famous in Moslem Turkey, on account of their elaborate Tekes and extraordinary ritual, which attracted hundreds of curious tourists even when native interest was on the decline.

These sects were known as the Bektachi, or fire worshippers, the Rufais, or Howling Dervishes, and the Mevlevis, or Dancing Dervishes. Besides being distinguished in ritual and form of worship, the three sects wore special garments and distinctive head coverings.

The secret order of the Nakshibendis had no individual shrines, and practiced their particular form of worship in any Mosque. They wore a fez and white turban like any Muslim or even student of theology, so that only their secret passwords and signs revealed their identity as Dervishes.

No picturesque practices attracted tourists and publicity, and yet they were known to be more fanatical than all other sects, to have great influence among the people, and while their number was said to be large it was almost impossible to locate all the sheiks and chieftains or to destroy an organization of which the rallying point and meeting place could only be surmised.

AS said before, the religious practices of the different Dervish groups were very different. The Bektachis were founded during the fourteenth century by a Persian named Hadji Bektach, and adopted some of the oldest beliefs the world has known, such as a form of fire worship deriving from Zoroaster. They did not live in convents like the others, and only assembled at their sanctuary for initiation ceremonies and worship. In the center of a round hall a tall chandelier stood with 12 lighted flames. The members would worship the fire with their foreheads to the ground, and would on initiation swear by the flame which scorched hand, tongue and body that they would do no evil, tell no lies, and renounce lustful pleasures.

Outside of this often loosely observed sermon the Bektachis had few religious practices and beliefs. Openly thwarting the Moslem codes, they admitted women to their ceremonies and drank wine. That their devotion often took the form of orgies was a frequent and probably not totally unfounded accusation. On the other hand they had a liberalizing influence in Moslem society, and were bound by a fraternal obligation which made them stand by each other in time of need and use their influence in politics and business for the benefit of their members.

The Bektachis were credited with the organization of the famous Janizaries, a body guard of the Sultan, of which the members were recruited among children of Christians who had been brought up in the Moslem faith. These soldiers often felt small inclination for Islamic practices and were glad to have the Bektachis' protection.

The Howling and Dancing Dervishes, which were more mystically inclined than the Fire Worshipers, lived in convents adjoining their sanctuaries and derived a large income from visiting pilgrims and from their reputation as miracle workers, particularly in curing the sick.

The Mevlevis were the most attractive and really contributed a corographic and at times distinctly beautiful form of worship to the somewhat monotonous religious life.

Their founder, Djelaleddine Roumi, a Persian poet, left writings which are still widely read in the Islamic world. A mystic and a lover of nature, he aspired to find God and understand His greatness by partaking in world rhythm. By turning dizzily around in circles imitating the planets revolving around the sun he attained a form of religious exaltation which for him and his followers meant happiness.

THE dancers had their headquarters in Konia in Asia Minor, where pilgrims often brought their troubles, taking pieces of the Dervish garments as relics, and even going so far as to have them step on their prostrate bodies.

In Istanbul and Scutari they had monasteries and Tekes, and every Friday afternoon visitors could witness the ceremony. Besides the distinctive tall brown cap, the dancers wore flowing colored vestments.

With bare feet, extended arms and upturned faces they would start by rhythmic movement, accompanied by instruments such as flutes and drums played by some of their companions; they would then revolve with growing speed, hardly moving from the spot, never changing direction, until the head fell on one shoulder and the face could hardly be seen in the fantastic pivotal dance which only ended when the last celebrant fell to the ground in a religious trance resembling a faint.

Dancing as well as Howling Dervishes can still be found in Syria, Irak and Egypt, but even in those countries the practice seems to be gradually disappearing.

The Rufais, or howlers, were first founded in Irak and became numerous in Turkey, building a vast convent and sanctuary in Scutari on the Bosphorus. They attained religious exaltation by repeating and finally howling the names of God, accompanying their cry by rhythmic movements in which, with their arms entwined around each other's necks, they swayed back and forth amid a din of noise, somewhat resembling the "shakers" of a later day.

A Dervish of the mysterious Nakshibendi sect practicing self-hypnotism in prayer . . . by which all consciousness of the outer world is suspended.

Repetitious prayer, self-torture and the exaltation which are said to be derived from the exercise are widely practiced by the mysterious Nakshibendis. The aspirants are carefully trained in the use of a formula which has to be repeated hundreds of times, until the mind learns to use it automatically and all other thoughts or physical sensibility are eliminated.

When Kemal Pasha waged war against the Greeks and chased them from Anatolia, the Nakshibendis worked actively for what they regarded as a Holy War.

ONE can easily imagine the dismay and indignation of the Dervishes when the first president of the Turkish republic, the victorious Kemal Pasha, decided to face west and have the country model its laws and customs according to the practice of Christian nations. Dervishes had to follow fez and Arabic alphabet on the scrap heap of discarded tradition.

It was easy to close Tekes and have practices such as religious dancing and howling discontinued by police ordinance: it did not take long to tear fezzes and turbans from the heads of people, burn books and modify printing presses, but with the Nakshibendi it was different. They replaced the turban with a hat, they were silent and sullen, but they have in no way disappeared.

Hiding beyond the frontiers of Syria and Irak as well as in Palestine, fugitive Dervishes promote pan-Arabic union with the destruction of republican Turkey in mind.

Carefully concealing their real identity, they move amid ignorant crowds in agricultural Anatolia, urging them to oppose passive resistance to the government's efforts, to continue in the ancient practice of polygamy and turn their caps with the visor to the back in order not to offend God.

Notwithstanding the third degree methods and the pressure brought upon them, no information could be gained as to the membership and actual practices of the Nakshibendi. Those on which sentence was passed were all taken to Menemen and awaited death crowded in the prison cells. The Dervishes sat or knelt on the ground, and in order to free their minds from other thoughts they practiced their special methods of self-hypnosis, both by repetitious prayer with deep and rhythmic breathing, as well as by concentrating the eyes on the center of each other's eyebrows or on a mysterious sign purposely scratched on the wall.

The glories of Allah were murmured thousands of times during the night. The minds became fixed and void as the condemned men swayed slightly back and forth, and the hours slipped by unnoticed: at dawn unflinchingly they faced the gallows. A boy escaped, only to be caught again. He was not a Dervish, and for him this life had many attractions.

The mystics who hate modernity, innovation and progress already looked confidently upon another life for them, "a vision of fulfilled desire." Without either looking right or left they passed unconsciously through the door which held no terrors for them.
